Many students have "turtle neck." This happens when their neck sticks forward. It often comes from using smart phones, studying or sitting for a long time. When you have turtle neck, you may get neck pain, back pain, or headaches. But don't worry. Here are some easy stretches @to help with turtle neck.

Stand and spread your feet. Bend your arms to make a W shape. Then lean your head backward. Look up at a 45-degree angle. Hold for 10 seconds. This stretch is great for your neck and shoulders.

Lie on your bed with your head at the edge. Let your head hang off the bed. Hold for 60 seconds. Don't do this for longer than 60 seconds. It can make you feel dizzy. This stretch helps relax your neck and back.
